

Muslim-Christian Dialogue

March 24, 6:00-9:00 pm

El-Hibri Foundation
1420 16th St. NW, DC

WASHINGTON
THEOLOGICAL
CONSORTIUM

Our Distinguished Speakers

Dr. Amr Abdalla Amb. Anthony Quainton

Free and Open to the Public

RSVP wtc@washtheocon.org or call 202-832-2675

Metro to Dupont Circle and go east to 16th, then south, or park at meters on 16th or the Colonial Garage on P Street.

Sixth Annual Taha Al-Alwani Lectures in Muslim-Christian Dialogue

*Violence in the Name of Religion:
Origins, Recent Developments, and Transformations*

Dr. Amr Abdalla

*Senior Advisor of Policy Analysis and Research Institute for Peace and Security Studies
Addis Abbaba University*

Ambassador Anthony Quainton

*Diplomat in Residence and Professor of Foreign Policy
School of International Service
American University*

Presentations, Discussion and Full Reception

WASHINGTON
THEOLOGICAL
CONSORTIUM

3025 4th Street NE, Suite 120
Washington DC, 20017

Topic for this Year's Alwani Event

Given the shocking acts of terror by religious extremists in France and Denmark in recent months, and the ongoing acts of religious violence in Africa, the Middle East and elsewhere, a new analysis of the role of religions in contributing to violence or opening paths for peace is called for.

While militant forms of religion – be it Islam, Christianity, or others – can incite and justify acts of violence, humane forms of these religions can address a complex of social, economic, and political factors and empower them to be transformed by shared values and principles of justice. Our distinguished speakers will address this timely issue from distinct religious and theoretical perspectives and invite further dialogue.

